

Summer is upon us, and we're excited that we get to go back to Chile this month! As much as we've enjoyed seeing family, friends, and familiar faces, our hearts long to be where God has placed us. (Also, we're ready to be back in our own home living out of closets and drawers instead of suitcases, but that's beside the point!)

Our visa process is moving forward. We've been asked to present ourselves at the Chilean consulate to show some documents, after which we should have our visas approved within a few months. I think last time we did this they were approved about two months after we did this step. This will be our last temporary visa before we get to apply for permanent residency and move in and out of the country at will.

Things are still going well in Chile. A little over a week ago, several men from various churches attended a men's retreat over the weekend. This is always a great time of fellowship and spiritual growth.

Liberty Baptist, where we served our first two years in Chile, had a fantastic Mother's Day service with several visitors, including many from another English class they're running. It's exciting to see all that God is doing there, even when we've left. Even though we'll be switching over to our own church plant at Joy Baptist, Liberty will always have a place in our hearts as well.

Speaking of Joy Baptist, I continue to look for a property that we can rent and fix up to start having services. There's a lot of work to be done between now and when we will launch our first service, but I'm really excited about all of the possibilities and preparation. It's good to feel like all we've been working toward is going to start coming to fruition soon.

As always, thank you all for your prayers and support. The next time I send our prayer letter, I should be doing so from my desk in Chile, and I can't wait. God bless you all!
